AIMS AND SCOPE

Asian Journal of Control, an ACA (Asian Control Association) and CACS (Chinese Automatic Control Society) affiliated journal, is the first international control journal originating from the Asia Pacific region.

Asian Journal of Control publishes papers on original theoretical and experimental research as well as developments involving all facets of control theory and its application. Published on a bi-monthly basis, the journal aims to be a key interface between control communities within Asia Pacific and throughout the world.

Asian Journal of Control not only provides a forum where control researchers and practitioners can exchange knowledge and experiences on the latest advances in the control areas, but also plays an educational role for students as well as experienced researchers interested in this continually growing field.

The scope of the journal is extensive. Topics include:

- The theory and design of control systems and components, encompassing
  - Robust and distributed control using geometric, optimal, stochastic and nonlinear methods
  - Game theory and state estimation
  - Adaptive control, including neural networks, learning, parameter estimation and system fault detection
- Artificial intelligence, fuzzy and expert systems
- Hierarchical and man-machine systems
- All parts of systems engineering which consider the reliability of components and systems
- Emerging application areas, such as
  - Robotics
  - Data processing
  - Mechatronics
  - Computers for computer-aided design, manufacturing, and control of various industrial processes

- Space vehicles and aircraft, ships, and traffic
- Biomedical systems
- National economies
- Power systems
- Agriculture
- Natural resources

Submitted articles may include

- Review Papers (extensive reviews of established or emerging research topics or application areas)
- Regular Papers (detailed discussion involving new research, applications or development)
- Brief Papers (brief presentations of new technical concepts and developments).

The journal also publishes special issues on subjects of increasing importance.

FORTHCOMING PAPERS

- Analysis and Applications of the Motion Message Estimator for Network Control Systems
Chen-Chou Hsieh and Pau-Lo Hsu, Department of Electrical and Control Engineering, National Chiao-Tung University, Hsinchu, Taiwan (Vol.10, No.1)
- Communication and Sensing Trade-Offs in Cooperative Mobile Networks
Yasamin Mostofi, Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering, University of New Mexico, USA; and Richard M. Murray, Caltech, California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, CA, USA; (Vol.10, No.2)
- On H-infinity Model Reduction for Discrete-Time LTI Systems Using LMIs
Yoshio Ebihara
Yoshito Hirai and Tomomichi Hagiwara, Department of Electrical Engineering, Kyoto University, Kyoto, Japan (Vol.10, No.3)
- Robust Tracking Control Design for Uncertain Robotic Systems with Persistent Bounded Disturbances
Chung-Shi Tseng, Department of Electrical Engineering, Ming Hsin University of Science and Technology, Hsin-Feng, Taiwan (Vol.10, No.4)

FORTHCOMING SPECIAL ISSUES

- Networked Embedded Hybrid Control Systems
- Collective Behavior and Control of Multi-Agent Systems
- Advanced Control Methods for Scanning Probe Microscopy

BENEFITS OF REGISTRATION

Registration on Wiley InterScience confers a host of benefits, including

- robust customization features,
- automatic content alerting, and
- Pay-Per-View options.

Registration is optional, cost-free, and involves no subscription or commitment. All registration information is kept private and confidential.

In 2008, libraries and institutions can opt in to have COMPLIMENTARY online access to Asian Journal of Control. Please RECOMMEND your librarians NOW!
